“ Mimi, there are no words to truly express the grief I feel from losing you. My heart is literally broken into millions of pieces. You gave me more memories in my life time than I could possibly count. From Friday afternoons in your car jamming out to The Beach Boys to you staying with me after I had my first baby making me chef salads. The pain I feel right now runs so freaking deep it's unreal, but knowing you are no longer in pain makes it worth it. You loved me unconditionally, but you were also always the first to tell me when I was messing up. Never one to bite your tongue :) There are no combination of words in this entire world that could convey just how much I am going to miss you. I love you so much more than you will ever, ever know. I am going to go this weekend and rock the shit out of life school for you and until I see you again, I promise to always be a good girl. Love you forever, Kass
